PANEL DISCUSSION:

STRUCTURAL ENGINEERING AND ITS RISKS Risk Management for All Engineers

Six members on this panel, each with extensive expertise in their field, will respond to questions posed by the moderator and the audience. Questions are intended to educate us about potential risks and liabilities associated with day-to-day activities of structural engineers and their firms. Discussions will prepare us for these potential risks and how to minimize them. Topics covered include understanding key components of contracts for services, contract clauses to include and clauses to avoid, getting invoices paid and steps that can be taken to help ensure timely payment, standard of care, common situations leading to lawsuits, personal liability versus firm liability and more. This presentation is geared for attendance by every member of your firm.

Panelists include:

- Two construction law attorneys
- A professional liability insurance broker
- A representative of SEAOSC's Professional Practices Committee
- The president of a local structural engineering firm
- A structural engineer with experience in design and as an expert witness in lawsuits involving professionals in the construction industry.
